

Whereas the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, byon information heretofore geuen vnto the same, of the great and excellue ppyces that wyndes transported byther out of Fraunce, were growen vnto, much to the impoueryshing of this her realme, did (for the pꝛeuenting of the inconuenience that was like to encrease & ensue therof) by her Maiesties pꝛoclamation, bearing date the xv. day of July, in the xviij. yeere of her raigne, notifie and publish vnto such her Maiesties subiectes, as dyd and doo vse the trade of byyngyng in those kyndes of wyndes, that they shoulde forbear to byyng into any parte of this Realme the sayde wyndes, vnlesse they myght vtter & vent them after the rate of ten poundes the Tunne, with al maner of extraordinary charges, byon suche payne as in the sayde pꝛoclamation is conteyned. And although her Maiesties good and gracious meaning therein, by the indirect and couetous practises of some persons that brought in the sayd wyndes, toke not so good effect as her expectation was it shoulde haue done: Yet her Maiestie and her pꝛiue Counsell, fynding by good experience, that it is both necessary & profitable to her subiectes, to continue the order of the sayde former pꝛoclamation, not onely for such wyndes as shalbe hereafter brought into this Realme, out of the Countrey aforesaid, but also honorable to her Maiestie, to cause the same pꝛoclamation to be duely executed for those that haue been brought in since the publishing therof, and remaine yet vnfulde by the Marchaunt. Therefore her Maiestie, with the aduise of her Counsell, straitely wylleth, chargeth, and commaundeth al her subiectes, and others, that shall byyng those wyndes into this Realme, duely to obserue the same rate and pꝛyce of ten poundes the Tunne, with all maner of ordinary and extraordinary charges, byon payne of imprisonment, and of such further penaltie and purgymment, as by any maner of Statute, Lawe, or pꝛerogatiue, may be inflicted bypon the transgressours and contemners thereof: whereyn her Maiesties intention is, and so she publisheth by these presentes, to all her sayde subiectes, that no sauour, tolleracion, or qualification, shalbe vsed vnto them, in respecte of the great benefyte that is lyke to redounde to this Realme, by the due obseruation thereof.

And whereas by the sayde last pꝛoclamation, no order was set downe for the restraynyng of the excellue pꝛices of Retaylers and Witterers of the sayde wyndes, of late yeeres exacted: Her Maiestie now by the aduise aforesaid, straitely commaundeth and chargeth, that none of the sayde Retaylers or Witterers of the sayd wyndes, shall sell any wyndes, alredie by them bought, and not vttered, or hereafter to be bought and retayled, for aboue xvi. d. the Gallon: and so ratably and proportionably for other measures vnder the same, byon payne of imprisonment, and suche further penalties as may by any Statute heretofore in this behalfe provided, be imposed or layde byon them, and as they wyl auoyde her hyghnesse indignation and displeasure.

Geuen at her Maiesties Pallace of Westminster, the xxvii. day of July. 1576. In the xviii. yeere of her hyghnesse most prosperous raigne.

God saue the Queene.
